

INAUGURAL LECTURES

The University of Gloucestershire is pleased to announce its 2008-9 Inaugural Lecture Programme

Patricia Broadfoot Vice-Chancellor and Professor of Education	Learning for Life: an educational agenda for the third millennium	Wednesday 29 October 2008	The Park TC014
Stephen Hill Professor of All-Age Learning	The Archaeology of Learning	Tuesday 18 November 2008	The Park TC014
Simon Barker Professor of English Literature	'Like a Soldier to the Stage': Field Commander Hamlet and the ends of tragedy	Wednesday 10 December 2008	Francis Close Hall Campus, TC001
Andrew Parker Professor of Sport and Christian Outreach	Sport and Religion: Past, Present and Future	Wednesday 25 February 2009	Oxstalls Campus LC003
Kristine Mason-O'Connor Professor of Higher Educational Development	Out of Gloucestershire: the radical educational legacies of Beatrice Webb and Albert Mansbridge	Tuesday 17 March 2009	The Park TC014
Brian Ilbery Professor of Rural Studies	Food supply chains: the long and short of it	Tuesday 28 April 2009	The Park TC014
Marin Marinov Professor of Management	Emerging Markets: Opportunities and Challenges for Global Business	Thursday 18 June 2009	The Park TC014

Lectures will start at 6pm and will be followed by a reception.

Lectures are open to all and are free, but booking is essential.

For further information or to express an interest in attending any these lectures, please email inaugurallecures@glos.ac.uk

Programme may be subject to change.

The Inaugural Lecture programme for 2009-10 will be available shortly and will include Professor Stephen Rayner and Professor Lindsey McEwen.